SKIRTING AROUND

With the cold weather fast approaching, skirt hemlines have dropped dramatically. Calf-length skirts were spotted across numerous designers' A/W 2013 collections, and a favourite find is the claret-coloured, high-waisted skirt from Vivienne Westwood. The demure length is modernised with a metallic strip, and by cinching the luxe fabric around the waist with a simple black belt. Worn with heels, the figure-flattering shape skims the thighs and starts and ends at some of the thinnest parts of the body. Dress the look up for night with a tucked-in slinky jumper or a contrasting deep neckline.

LOGUE LONDON

Logue London was founded out of necessity when Emma Logue, a former banker at Morgan Stanley, was faced with a shortage of options for choosing a workplace wardrobe. The result is her luxurious shirt-dress boutique in Knightsbridge, which specialises in smart workwear, typified by button-down dresses and separates. This season, look out for Logue London's light autumnal coats – with their elegantly nipped-in waists and colourful turned-up cuffs, they're ideal for transitioning from summer to winter.
